

Ship Economy of Aberdeen Tobermory to Nova Scotia, 1819

by
Eugene Quigley, John Livingstone & Keith Dash

Economy left Tobermory on 4th August 1819 with 285 passengers on board and arrived at Pictou, Nova Scotia, on 4th October with all passengers “in good health and spirits, together with four children born upon the passage”. No shipping list has been found, but it is known that Economy carried passengers from Tiree, Coll, Colonsay, and probably elsewhere in the Highlands and Western Isles. Some of the passengers from Tiree or Coll were identified by Rev. A. Maclean Sinclair (in The Clan Gillean, 1899), Betty MacDougall (in The Coll Magazine, 1993) or Nicholas Maclean-Bristol (in From Clan to Regiment, 2007), and are listed in the table below. Passengers from Colonsay were identified by John Livingstone. The table notes are based on information provided by the above authors and the indexes of entries in the Coll Parish Register 1766-1855 or the Genealogy Section of the Isle of Colonsay website.

* The ‘proper’ spelling of the Johnston/Johnson surname is contentious among descendants of the Collach families. Betty MacDougall (1993) explained it thus: When Lachlan Johnston bought his farm [in Canada], his name was wrongly spelled on the deed, without the ‘t’. It was easier to change the name than the deed and so it remained although some descendants did revert to the Johnston spelling.
